

Every Party Needs One

I detest beer and pretzels
And can't tolerate the smoke
I hate to sit and listen
To any off-color joke
I loathe all hard liquor
And hate the taste of wine
But when you throw a party
Invite me every time.

I can't stand idle chatter
And hate to be in crowds
I don't like modern dancing
Or music that's much too loud.
I find those who drink offensive
And games bore me to tears
But when you throw a party,
Be sure that I am near.

I know that my perspectives
May cause you to regret
Your reason for inviting me
But lest you soon forget
Every party's not a party
Without at least that one
Who, when things are swinging,
Throws a damper on the fun.
